

KF Reading Guide

Chapter 10: Morbid Dependency¹

1. Which is the least satisfactory among the three neurotic solutions? (239.1)
2. Why do self-effacing people feel miserable more often and more intensely than others? (239.1)
3. What lures this type as the supreme fulfillment? (239.3)
4. What does love seem to promise for these people? (240.1)
5. What is the appeal of love for the typical self-effacing person? (240.2)
6. What two deep and powerful sources feed the longing for love? (240.2)
 - A.
 - B.
7. Self-effacing people have a propensity to do what? (240.2)
8. Love also appears to this type as the only way to do what? (241.2)
9. What ranks first among the factors determining the self-effacing person's self-evaluation? (241.3)
10. What does rejection mean for self-effacing people? (241.3)
11. Which of these shoulds or claims do you recognize in yourself or others? (241.4–242.1)

12. In what other relationships may the dynamics of morbid dependency occur? (243.2)
13. Instead of actually choosing a partner, self-effacing people are what? (243.3)
14. What specifically accounts for this type's fascination with expansive people? (244.2)
15. What allows self-effacing people to participate in the mastery of life? (244.2)
16. In what two factors does this type's magnetic attraction to expansive types lie? (246.1)
 - A.
 - B.
17. What is the first characteristic of the self-effacing partner in a morbidly dependent relationship? (247.2)
18. At bottom what are both partners feeling when they clash on the issue of "love"? (248.3–249.1)
19. How does the fluctuating process that leads into more and more conflicts begin? (251.2)
20. When pride has been broken, this type's compliance is determined by what longing? (251.3)
21. The need for total surrender makes what necessary? (252.2)
22. How do self-effacing types try to improve a relationship? (253.2)
23. What emotion may become conscious in flashes, and what trends come to the fore? (253.3)

24. Although the longing to gain the partner's love persists, it becomes more strongly a matter of what? (254.1)
25. What are morbidly dependent people unable to do if their pride is satisfied? (254.2)
26. Why is this type driven to be tormented and humiliated? (255.1)
27. Ultimately, for the morbidly dependent type, what does the partner become? (255.1)
28. Which process is eminently painful for this type? (257.2)
29. What can go far toward helping the self-effacing person attain a measure of inner freedom? (258.1)
30. This passionate character of the involvement cannot exist without what expectation? (258.3)
31. What drives the morbidly dependent type? (258.3)

¹ This reading guide refers to the 1991 edition of Neurosis and Human Growth: The Struggle Toward Self-Realization by Karen Horney, published by W.W. Norton and Company Inc. New York.