

KF Reading Guide

Chapter 11: *Resignation*¹

1. The third major solution of the internal conflict consists of what? (259.1)
2. Why does Dr. Horney call this solution “resignation”? (259.1)
3. Resigned people often pass for what? (259.1)
4. For this neurotic solution, what does resignation imply? (260.2)
5. Describe the picture of resignation? (260.3)
6. What distinguishes the basic characteristics of resignation? (260.4)
7. What is the resigned type’s ubiquitous and prominent attitude? (261.1)
8. What does “being an onlooker” at oneself mean? (261.1)
9. What risk does this type avoid? (261.2)
10. What characteristic of the resigned type is intimately connected with nonparticipation? (261.3)
11. Concomitant with the aversion to effort, what is absent in the resigned person? (262.5)
12. What does “serenity” mean for this type? (263.1)
13. Who should present the clue that will solve everything? (263.1)

14. What does this type always mind? (263.1)
15. What is the very essence of resignation? (263.2)
16. What do resigned people believe it is better not to do? (263.2)
17. What is the one wish that a resigned person does have? (264.1)
18. What are the two outstanding neurotic claims of this type? (264.1)
 - A.
 - B.
19. What is the resigned person particularly anxious not to do? (264.2)
20. If the loss of someone or something would be painful, what do resigned people do? (264.2)
21. Even in lasting relationships, what must this type maintain? (265.3)
22. To what is the resigned type hypersensitive? (266.2)
23. How might this type express inward rebellion? (266.3)
24. What do resigned people feel as a coercion? (266.4–267.1)
25. Lastly, what else goes with resignation? (267.3)

26. Besides inertia, what two factors enter into this type's attitude toward change? (267.3–268.1)

A.

B.

27. When resigned people accept others as unalterable, what are they reflecting? (268.2)

28. At first glance we get the impression that the resigned type primarily gives up what? (269.3)

29. Which of the expansive trends that may appear in the resigned type interest you? (270.3–271.1)

30. Which of the self-effacing trends that may appear in the resigned type interest you? (271.3–272.2)

31. How do resigned types try to reach integration? (272.3)

32. On what do resigned people lay an emphasis? (272.4)

33. From the viewpoint of resignation, what curtails freedom? (274.1)

34. What is the obvious flaw in the idea of freedom for this type? (274.3)

35. The resigned type's ambivalent way of responding to others is a curious mixture of what? (278.2)

36. What tendency is reinforced by the strain of associating with others? (279.1)
37. What results from “silent resistance”? (279.2)
38. What is the anxious concern of resigned people? (281.1)
39. What three forms of living in resignation does Dr. Horney identify? (281.2)
- A.
 - B.
 - C.
40. What motivates a resigned type to do routine work? (282.1)
41. What does pervasive inertia bear within it? (282.3)
42. Apart from deterioration, what are the dangers of pervasive inertia? (282.3)
43. What one thing might resigned people want to change? (283.2)
44. Actually, the resigned type is what? (283.3)
45. What becomes more meaningless as resigned people become more alienated from themselves? (285.4)
46. What old truth must resigned people (and all neurotic types) learn? (281.1; Mark 8:34-38)

¹ This reading guide refers to the 1991 edition of Neurosis and Human Growth: The Struggle Toward Self-Realization by Karen Horney, published by W.W. Norton and Company Inc. New York.