

KF Reading Guide

Chapter 8: *The Expansive Solution*¹

1. In neurosis the alienation from self is the nuclear problem, and we always find what five characteristics in neurotic developments? (187.1)
 - A.
 - B.
 - C.
 - D.
 - E.
2. Apart from the conflict between the pride system and the real self, what other conflict also arises? (187.1–188.1)
3. In what three ways can neurotic people experience themselves? (189.2)
 - A.
 - B.
 - C.
4. About what do neurotics feel uncertain? (189.2)
5. What are the three methods of solving intense internal conflict? (189.4–190.2)
 - A.
 - B.
 - C.
6. What is central to the author's framework of theories? (191.1)
7. What we regard as "types" are actually what? (191.2)

8. What would be a more nearly correct term than “types”? (191.2)
9. What are the three neurotic solutions presented in the book? (191.3)
 - A.
 - B.
 - C.
10. How do the expansive types identify themselves? (191.3)
11. What is the expansive neurotic’s chief determination? (192.1)
12. What is the expansive type’s most poignant dread? (192.1)
13. What is the expansive type bent upon? (192.2)
14. When we go far enough into the analysis of expansive patients, what other trends do we discover? (192.2)
15. What must the expansive type eliminate from awareness? (192.2)
16. Expansive types must try to maintain what kind of picture of themselves? (193.1)
17. To what are expansive types excessively sensitive? (193.1)

18. What are the three subdivisions of the expansive type? (193.2)

- A.
- B.
- C.

Narcissistic Expansive Type

19. What does the author mean by “narcissism”? (194.1)

20. What characteristics strike you about the narcissistic type? (194.1–196.1)

Perfectionist Expansive Type

21. What characteristics strike you about the perfectionist type? (196.2–197.2)

Arrogant-Vindictive Expansive Type

22. With what does the third expansive type identify? (197.3)

23. What is this type’s main motivating force in life? (197.3)

24. What makes arrogant-vindictive people extremely competitive? (198.2)

25. What is the most conspicuous manifestation of this type’s vindictiveness? (198.3)

26. The arrogant-vindictive type is a past master in what? (199.3)
27. Which claims of arrogant-vindictive neurotics bother you the most? (200.2)
28. What is chronic about this type? (200.3)
29. How do vindictive types do away with the distress of feeling unlovable? (203.1)
30. Feeling like a pariah, what must arrogant-vindictive people prove? (204.3)
31. In actual fact, what do arrogant-vindictive types feel about people? (206.2)
32. To justify their own hostility, what must vindictive types do? (206.2)
33. In what do arrogant-vindictive types feel pride? (206.3)
34. What trends appear in all expansive types? (207.2)
35. What are the three sources of the mixed phenomenon of the punitive attitude of the aggressive-vindictive type? (208.2)
- A.
 - B.
 - C.

36. Aside from externalizations, how else does this type ward off self-hate? (208.3-4)
- A.
 - B.
37. When we understand how arrogant-vindictive people are caught in the machinery of their pride system, how might we see them? (209.2)
38. What makes the need for vindictive triumph compulsive for this type? (210.2)
39. Which of these motivating forces in the arrogant-vindictive type stir up the most compassion in you? (210.2–212.2)
40. In what ways do the three expansive types try to achieve mastery? (212.3)
- A. Narcissist: self-admiration and the exercise of charm.
 - B. Perfectionist:
 - C. Arrogant-Vindictive:
41. How do the three expansive types deal with their feelings of hostility? (212.4–213.1)
- A. Narcissistic:
 - B. Perfectionist:
 - C. Arrogant-Vindictive:
42. For the expansive type, the chances for growth through therapy depend on what factors? (213.2)

¹ This reading guide refers to the 1991 edition of Neurosis and Human Growth: The Struggle Toward Self-Realization by Karen Horney, published by W.W. Norton and Company Inc. New York.