

KF8 Expanded Version of Teachings

Karis is an invitation to a relationship based on mutual generosity.

“Search me, O God, and know my heart. Examine me and know my thoughts. See if there is any way in me that causes pain, and lead me in the ways of eternity.” (Psalm 139:23–24)

0:01 OPENING

0:02 PRESENTING

0:06 KARIS CIRCULATION

If you are benefiting from this ministry, we invite you to return a financial gift in proportion to your financial resources. This is karis, the Greek word for grace, which we now understand as a relationship with others based on mutual generosity. In KF, we learn to respond to God’s gifts by returning a gift that represents our gratitude. We also learn to respond to one another with karis generosity. Find Give a Gift at the top right of the KF website home page. You can offer a one-time gift to Karis Fellowships, or you can select the option to make a regular automated donation.

0:07 GUIDELINES & LIMITATIONS

0:08 MINDFULNESS & MEDITATION TRAINING

We might thank Alison, who created the original Karis Fellowships website as a gift to the KF community. Alison has donated much of her time and skill to the organization and design of this ministry. She and her husband explored the mindfulness training that was offered in their community and then brought to KF some of the practices that they had learned, including the 3-Minute Breathing Space and a prototype of the FAITH Process. We are grateful for their contribution. We recommend that you seek extra mindfulness training in your own community and online. Websites like meditationoasis.com and headspace.com may help you develop a practice that works for you. You can also look for guided meditations on YouTube.

The Maranatha Meditation<sup>1</sup>

Begin by sitting still and as upright as you can. Breathe as you lightly close your eyes. (Pause for 10 seconds) Silently, within your own mind, begin to slowly say the word MAA-RAA-NAA-THAA. Maranatha is Aramaic for Come, Lord. Pay attention to the word as you explore what works for you. You might try saying two syllables on the inhale and two on the exhale. Or, if you wish, you can pace your breath and attend to all four syllables on the inhale and to all four syllables on the exhale. You can explore that now. (Pause for 30 seconds) To help you endure, I will remind you of the word maranatha once during our three-minute meditation. Relax into the word as you continue to observe your breath, and begin. (Pause for 3 minutes with a reminder of the word at 1.5 minutes)

Pause. Take a deep breath and open your eyes. Gently draw your mind back to the meeting. You might begin practicing this meditation for twenty minutes in the morning and then again later in the day.

Remember that the struggle to focus strengthens your ability to be mindful, just as the struggle to lift a weight makes you strong.

Our hymn, Teach Me Thy Way, O Lord, describes normal life events that happen to everyone. Mindfulness training helps us endure productively so that in all of life's events we can respond by doing things God's way.

When I am sad at heart, teach me Thy way!
When earthly joys depart, teach me Thy way!
In hours of loneliness, in times of dire distress,
In failure or success, teach me Thy way!<sup>2</sup>

Take a deep breath.

(If time permits, ask, "Does anyone have comments or questions about this training?")

0:20 KARIS CONFESSION

When we find ourselves in experiments and events, the key to our healing is to observe, confess, and work on our own misorientation. We cannot heal ourselves if we are focused on the misorientation of others.

0:21 TOOLBOX

This month we are exploring KF Confession 2:

We abandoned the glory that was ours, designed for us by our Creator.

Pull out your Two Paths Flowchart once again. I would like to remind you to keep practicing the tools that you have learned so far. It's not enough to have the tools in your toolbox. You must develop the skill to use those tools, and that takes time and practice. You now have six tools to help you maintain your orientation to God and to your True Self:

- The Meeting Preparation Guide and weekly training meetings
- The Bible and the book Neurosis and Human Growth<sup>3</sup>
- Mindfulness and meditation
- Worksheets and guides
- The Tapping Protocol
- The Two Paths Flowchart

Let's review some points that will help clarify our mission in KF.

1. Our purpose in KF

You are working to reclaim the glory that your Creator intended for you. You are a child of God, an heir of your Father's house, but the world, the flesh, and the devil still hold you captive.<sup>4</sup> In order to reveal His glory, you will need to co-labor with God to ransom the creature that He created—your True Self. Co-laboring with God in that process may require much of your resources right now. The ransom of your True Self cost Jesus a great deal, but Jesus thought you were worth it. Do you? In our book, Neurosis and Human Growth, Dr. Horney explains why we often do not think we are worth it and why we abandon our true glory to pursue the glory of the Idol Self.<sup>5</sup> Review the chapter that describes your Idol type to remind yourself of your particular drives and fears. You might think about how much you have lost by pouring your energy into your Idol's compelling but misoriented solutions to life's conflicts.

Part of our work in Karis Fellowships is to develop a new vision of ourselves as created beings who are of inestimable value to God and have an essential mission in this material world. The Bible does not describe God's people in any other way. If we want to manifest the glory of God, we will have to give up the compelling dreams of the Idol and turn our energy and hearts toward becoming all that God created us to be. Like any worthwhile venture, we must have courage and endurance if we are to display the glory of God in this world.

2. The Two Paths Flowchart—living in love or judgment

Over the next few weeks, we will be looking closely at how to use this flowchart. You may find it helpful to think of the two branches of the flowchart as the two different types of electrical current: direct and alternating. The lower path is the judgment path and might be likened to direct current that is supplied by a battery and can only flow in one direction. Since the battery has a limited life, this current has limited potential. We might think of the battery as the storehouse of our legal systems, the source of the power behind our judgments. Like the direct current, these judgments can only flow one way—toward the object of our displeasure. When you are committed to the path of judgment, you are fixed in a certain pattern of thinking and reacting that militates against listening, learning, changing, and forgiving. If you choose this path, you will inevitably create misoriented outcomes; you will lose your True Self and forfeit your karis relationship with God.

The upper path is the path of love and might be likened to an alternating current, which moves bidirectionally and is constantly supplied by a replenishing energy source. When you choose the upper path, you are connected to your Creator and His limitless resources, and you have enduring power. Like an alternating current, which flows in two directions, the path of love permits information to move back and forth. It presents unlimited opportunities for creative solutions and the circulation of karis gifts. On this path, you use your energy to carefully observe, learn, and mindfully respond to what you learn. You can be flexible; you can instantly reassess and change direction. The path of love always leads to restorative, oriented outcomes, and it builds your karis relationship with God.

3. The event or day of judgment

James refers to events as experiments, and we can also apply John's phrase, the day of judgment. The purpose of these pesky life experiments is not to condemn or shame us; the purpose of these experiments is revelation. Life events examine and reveal the quality of our trust and our trustworthiness. We can welcome these experiments because God must reveal the problem before He can heal the problem. (Repeat) And we want to heal. However, the Idol Self invests a lot of energy in maintaining illusions about who we are or who we should be. To avoid the conflicts that arise when reality collides with our illusions, we try to control the behavior of other people, or we escape from reality. We arrange our lives to avoid anything unexpected. We want to act, and we want other people to act, in a way that will maintain our comfortable illusions.

When we or others do not perform to our exacting standards, we experience strong feelings. We might believe that those feelings are a natural reaction to our own or another's stupid choices or to the violation of our imagined rights, but this really isn't so. The truth is that these feelings are a reaction to a perceived threat to our Idol Self. We have judged our own or another's performance as evil, according to our Idol's standards, and we have told ourselves a story about those judgments. At a lecture on neuroscience, I learned that the brain exists to make up stories about what the body is feeling. Making up stories— isn't that interesting?

4. Feelings are not meant to be our primary motivators

Feelings are just feelings. They are untrustworthy guides for knowing what is good and what is evil. I know this because the same event can affect different people in different ways. Some will judge an event as good, and others will judge the same event as evil. Here is an example. We took a young couple out to dinner. The young woman spent her time entertaining my husband, and the young man spent his time entertaining me. I thought it was generous of them to give the gift of their attention to two old fogies in return for our gift of the dinner. But afterwards I learned that the young woman had felt hurt because her husband had not given her more attention. So, what felt loving to me felt unloving to someone else. I have even seen people completely change their own evaluation of an event after a brief discussion or after doing some healing work. It seems like a miracle. What twenty minutes ago felt so evil now feels good to that same person.

5. The fear of death is the source of all unhealthy fear

Let's look a little more closely at the Reaction part of our flowchart. All living things react to the environment. If your environment presents a threat, you will react. These reactions often spring from the fear of losing your idealized life. This fear is the fear of death. The author of Hebrews writes that, without Jesus, all human creatures are enslaved to the fear of death throughout their lives. The fear of death, and the compelling need to escape that fear, is like a black hole that sucks all the energy and delight from our lives. Let's look at Hebrews 2:14–15 in my translation.

<sup>14</sup>Therefore, since the children share in flesh and blood, Jesus Himself likewise also shared the same limitations so that through death He might render powerless the one who had the power of death, that is, the devil or accuser, <sup>15</sup>and might liberate those who have been enslaved all of their lives because of their fear of death.

Take a deep breath.

When our search for glory is endangered, we experience intense feelings of frustration and threat; when we imagine that we have escaped our fear and are on our way to an idealized glory, we feel euphoric—we feel safe from the fear of death. Both of these reactions, however, are rooted in fear. We dread the death of our hopes, our illusions, our pride, and our cherished projects. We are terrified of all kinds of loss—loss of control, loss of freedom, loss of security. We fear not being the best, being alone, being unhappy, or feeling deprived. We are terrified of the self-hate that lurks in dark places ready to tear at us if we do not perform as scripted or if we cannot make others do so. Knowing that we lack necessary life skills increases our fear of death, and this heightened fear makes us work harder at trying to save our lives. When we feel relief from the myriad of fears that plague us, it feels like a happiness drug. We have temporarily escaped the fear of death. We feel powerful and safe. We are euphoric.

Whether we are afraid or euphoric, this deep fear of death keeps our beautiful energy focused on saving our lives and our pride. We then unconsciously force that focus onto those around us. We try to conscript them into supporting us in our efforts to save the life of our Idol Self. Paralyzing fear makes us rigidly egocentric. Our own survival story is the only reality that we are willing to accept when we are in crisis. We cannot afford to accept any other story; we must defend ourselves at all costs—ALL costs. We know from Jesus that when we try to save our lives, we end up losing it all, but the fear, our neurotic habits, and our poor training are stronger than our theories.<sup>6</sup> Unfortunately, by conscripting others, we sometimes succeed in getting our own way. Our occasional successes encourage us to keep recklessly disregarding what others need and want. As long as we are able to maintain the illusion that we have saved our lives and escaped from death, we are content. What a poor vision of happiness!

Life is full of difficulties and mishaps. Happiness is not found in avoiding such things, but rather in knowing how to handle them. If we are committed to the happiness of saving our idealized lives, we will keep chasing our tails in the process, running after something that constantly eludes us. We might feel busy and active while we are running, but we will make no real progress toward lasting happiness. This compulsion to save our life entrenches our fear of death even more deeply because we are not mindfully training in endurance, courage, or skill—tools that we need for successful living. When our goal is to simply find a happy place, we avoid the training necessary to develop real life skills that will support more happiness.

If we constantly prop up the Idol with our allegiance, we live in a precarious balance between anxiety and functionality. We can simulate healthy function, but only until we are confronted by life's challenging difficulties. Then we discover that we are actually slaves to fear—continuously watching, judging, and trying to avoid the next unexpected blow. Our amazing ability to create glorious outcomes is derailed by our Idol's fear and misdirected toward hypervigilance and the reactive compulsions that defend our pride system and temporarily prevent psychic disintegration. Not only that—the Idol squanders the power of our imagination by plotting and obsessing about our idealized lives. What a waste! This great gift of our imagination could be harnessed to do the work of liberating our True Self and actualizing our real potential as God's creatures.

My email address is nancy@karisfellowships.com. This week, I invite you to send me a list of your three greatest fears. I will send you an email to remind you. We will look at these fears anonymously in the weeks ahead and see what we can learn. How exciting!

Our prayer might go something like this:

Great Counselor, show me my real fears. (Repeat)

Take a deep breath.

(If time permits, ask, "Does anyone have comments or questions about the Toolbox?")

0:30    SHARING

1:00    BIBLE TEACHING

Let's continue with James 1:5–8. This is my translation.

<sup>5</sup>But if anyone should find themselves lacking practical skill in situations, let them ask God about it. God generously gives practical help to everyone, and He gives without throwing their dysfunction back in their faces to shame and belittle them. God will give wisdom to the one who asks for skill to deal with situations <sup>6</sup>but that person must ask in faith. In other words, he or she must be ready to act upon what God shows them without any hesitancy or wavering; for the one who wavers is like the surf of the sea, driven and tossed by the wind. <sup>7</sup>Such persons ought not to imagine that they will receive anything from the Lord, <sup>8</sup>being double-minded, or of two spirits, and therefore, unstable in all their ways.

Take a deep breath.

1. Success is often more spiritually unstable than distress

Remember that in order to develop the True Self we need a long-tempered endurance. No matter what happens around you, your real goal is to develop the long-tempered endurance that will equip you to live your life gloriously. We often think that we need endurance most in times of fear or loss, but that is not always the case. God usually has our attention in times of failure and during what our hymn calls “times of dire distress”.<sup>7</sup> It is in times of success that the quality of our training is revealed, and when we experience success—when we get what we want, when we feel euphoric—we need to be especially mindful and aware. How often have we seen so-called successful people fail to build trustworthy, fulfilled lives?

You might imagine that you will naturally learn to handle success productively and find peace with the new status quo, but this also requires training. Success brings unprecedented experiences and changes that create tension, and this tension causes our Idol Self to react. Your ability to handle success with success is directly proportional to your ability to endure that tension. Let’s take as an example the tension that we experience when we are successful in our personal development. For mastery type Christians, showing heartfelt kindness or mercy is success, but in order to maintain this positive direction they must endure the tension that comes from forfeiting an opportunity to conquer and punish. When self-effacing types successfully stand up for themselves or assert their preferences, they must endure the tension of feeling selfish; they must resist the compulsion to give in, please, or apologize. When resigned types dare to touch an area of self-awareness and make some progress toward feeling their real feelings, they must endure the craving to escape into stagnation and numbness. God is regularly seeking to stretch your ability to live gloriously, but He can only do this if you are able to productively endure the tension created by change. God wants to explore with you as, together, you discover your potential. You are an eternally developing creature who is learning the ways of eternity.

2. The basic problem is our commitment—are we committed to our Idol or to God?

Last week, we learned from James that if we are of two spirits, or double-minded, we cannot receive the wisdom that God has for each one of us. God is not unwilling or unable to give wisdom to you. His wisdom is always available to you, but if you are of two spirits, you will not be able to trust and endure the process required to learn that wisdom—nor will you be able to access it.

Learning to recognize and trust God’s wisdom requires training, training that prepares you to courageously act upon the wisdom He offers. God cannot train you, however, if you are still committed to the judgment path; you will refuse to follow through on His way of doing things. In an effort to save their lives, human beings consistently default to the judgment path, trusting in their own neurotic judgments. If you continue to run down that path, you will never learn to trust God. You can continue to harbor divided loyalties, but remember this: if you continue to harbor divided loyalties, you are not simply choosing between judgment and love; at the heart of your choice is this question—Who is your God?

When we are committed to our Idol Self, we are committed to another god, and if we obey the fear and compulsive demands of the Idol, we are obeying another god. As with all idol worship, our Idol's rituals, superstitions, beliefs, and choices are all based on fear and the escape from fear. It's not hard to see that the Idol Self is just another god and that whenever we follow the Idol's guidance, we are breaking God's first commandment: "Thou shalt have no other gods before Me."<sup>8</sup> When God confronts that problem in you, He is doing you a huge favor.

3. Two spirits are two masters

When we are torn between two masters, our instability becomes readily apparent, even to ourselves. One moment we are acting in love, and the next moment we are reacting with anger, losing self-control, or fleeing the scene. Other people find it difficult to trust us, and we can't even trust ourselves. When we cannot trust ourselves to fulfill our own dreams of glory, we put pressure on others to fulfill them for us. If we are stronger than they are, we may succeed in forcing them to act in ways that will relieve our anxiety about ourselves, but when we do so, we rob them of their resources and of the opportunity to invest in their own development. This is why being of two spirits is so damaging for those around us—for our spouses, our children, our fellow-employees, our community, and for our country. We are not to be trusted. We talk about being a Christian, but neither our words nor our lives reflect that glorious new birth. We are not yet convinced that God is who He says He is—the Creator and the only Lawgiver and Judge. We are not convinced that opposing Him has any real consequences. We would rather gratify our pride than access and enjoy God as our ally.

Everyone needs the support of common and gentle nurture as they try to build self-confidence and develop trusting relationships based on mutual esteem. However, when we fear losing our idealized life, we are forced to defend ourselves in ways that are sometimes extreme, and then we are unable to provide common and gentle nurture. In the face of threat, we get busy saving our Idol's life. We are as untrustworthy as a wounded wild animal, and in our frenzy to survive we selfishly sacrifice the needs of others on the altar of our Idol Self.

4. Karis Fellowships gives us tools that help us become single-spirit people

Here is another way of describing our goal in KF: we are working toward becoming single-spirit people. No one can serve two masters.<sup>9</sup> If you find that your life is full of unstable habits and relationships, if you make decisions but are regularly unable to follow them through, if you commit to training and then refuse to train, or if you have taken the name of Christian but choose to do your own thing, then you are like the surf of the sea, tossed back and forth by the winds of circumstances and feelings.<sup>10</sup> Would you put your trust in that kind of sea? Would you trust that kind of person? I hope not.

In KF, you learn that the Idol Self cannot be trusted. Perhaps you now agree that your master, the Idol Self, has been given a fair run but has failed to deliver the glory it promises. Hopefully, you are now ready to stop investing in its crying, clamoring stories about what it needs right now and are willing to take another road, the road that leads to your True Self. You will never discover the end of that road, but your discoveries along the way will be deeply satisfying. You will discover more and more of who you were created to be, in more and more situations, and you will experience an increasingly abundant LIFE. As you embrace what it is to be fully human and become a single-spirit person, you will experience greater security and come to know yourself as you truly are—the glorious creature of a real Creator who loves you. You will become more and more convinced that your own development is much more important than the achievement of certain idealized goals, and it is never too late to start.

I hope that you are now willing to admit that you are tempted to serve two masters. You might tell God this week that you are ready to give up trying to be God and are willing to train your woefully underdeveloped True Self. When you give up the life of trying to be your own god and doing your own thing, you will be free to pursue your real potential as a glorious creature in karis relationship with the real God, who is love. This love is beyond all that you can ask or think, but it is not beyond what you can experience.

Our prayer might go something like this:

God and Creator, I am ready to be Your creature in karis relationship. (Repeat)

Take a deep breath.

(If time permits, ask, "Does anyone have comments or questions about the Bible teaching?")

1:10 INTEGRATION

Sip some purified water and prepare to take some notes. Assume your stillness posture, and breathe. (Pause for 10 seconds)

Here is our integration focus: Consider living as a glorious creature serving the real God in a created world. (Repeat) (Pause for 30 seconds)

The FAITH Process

(Choose from each section a few sentences that are meaningful to you)

Feelings

As you consider living as a glorious creature serving the real God in a created world, how does it feel? (Pause) Your feelings are yours to teach you about yourself, to guide you, and to train you. They can often be uncomfortable. (Pause) You can learn to recognize and honor your feelings without allowing them to master you. Recognize with compassion whatever you may be experiencing, and breathe. (Pause for 30 seconds)

Awareness without judgment

Allow whatever you are experiencing to rest in your awareness. You might notice a compulsion to push thoughts or feelings away, to judge them, or to justify them. We often flush real feelings or thoughts from our awareness before they have a chance to teach us. (Pause) Breathe, and hold your experience up to the light as you consider living as a glorious creature serving the real God in a created world. Feelings and passing thoughts are not right or wrong; they just are. Give yourself permission now to explore them without judgment, and breathe. (Pause for 30 seconds)

Inquiry: What is my body saying?

Breathe, and bring your attention to your body. Lovingly notice what it is doing as you consider living as a glorious creature serving the real God. What sensations are there? (Pause) Your body is always talking to you. You may not understand its language right now, but you can observe. For example, you might notice what disbelief or potential feels like in your body. (Pause) If your sensations are uncomfortable, you can move your attention to an area of your body that is not reacting, and rest. When you are ready, return to observe those uncomfortable sensations. Breathe. (Pause for 30 seconds)

Talk to Jesus

You might imagine that you are leaning back in the safe and loving arms of Jesus as together you consider living as a glorious creature serving the real God in a created world. Does that feel comfortable, uncomfortable, or are you shutting down? Just observe. (Pause) Do you judge the idea of glorious living as good or bad? What are your reasons? What story do you want to tell? (Pause) Is this experience a regular pattern in your life? (Pause) Are you afraid of something—of loss, of what is possible, of others, or of yourself? Observe your responses as just information, and breathe with a long exhaling breath. (Pause for 30 seconds)

Heal

God created you to have all of these feelings, and for thousands of years human beings have been feeling like you feel when they have considered living as a glorious creature serving the real God in a created world. You are a human creature, and you are not alone in your feelings. (Pause) Feelings are just chemical reactions in our bodies bringing us information. With training, we can choose what we will do with that information. We can learn something from what we are experiencing. (Pause) When a fear or judgment signals you through the body, you can focus on your body and your breath rather than getting caught up in a story and reacting. Breathe, and allow yourself to feel some compassion for everyone who embraces this possibility of real glory. Help your body process with a long exhaling breath. (Pause for 30 seconds)

Pause. Take a deep breath.

(If time permits, ask, “Does anyone have comments or questions about the integration?”)

1:28 ENDING PRAYER

Dear Father and Creator,

We are so grateful for this time together. Hold us in the power of this new understanding as You guide us to our glory and to the truth. Lead us to the next step in our healing this week as we co-labor with You to reorient our lives for a more effective flow and to flourish in our connection with our True Self, with the Creation, and with You, for the glory and honor of our Lord Jesus. Amen.

Take a deep breath.

(If time permits, ask, “Does anyone have comments or questions about this meeting?”)

1:29 ANNOUNCEMENTS

There is a lot to learn and relearn as we renew our minds and thinking. You may wish to download and print out these teachings so that you can review them during your quiet moments, or you might ask admin to email you the KF Compass. You may also find it helpful to play back the recordings of these meetings and capture a few ideas to carry with you during the week.
