

KF16 Meeting Questions

Facilitator Tip: A question regularly asked in the KF training cycle is, “Why can’t we respond to another person’s sharing, give them feedback, or offer them encouragement?” To answer that question, I’d like to refer to one of our KF Guidelines and Limitations: We cooperate for the security and efficiency of the group.

Offering feedback, affirmations, or underscoring someone’s sharing with our own comments makes a group feel insecure. Positive feedback from others highlights one member’s sharing, while silence can feel like tacit disapproval. When facilitators offer feedback to another’s sharing, their example leads the group members to make comments of their own, and this erodes the sharing time. Sharing becomes unfocused and inefficient. A license to respond to someone else’s sharing invites members to compulsively please, evaluate, guide, correct, attack, or instruct others, all of which undermines group security.

Ask whichever questions are of interest to you. After someone responds to a question, you can ask the group if anyone else feels the same or has had a similar experience.

Mindfulness and Meditation

- What or who did you choose to show you compassion?
- Of which areas of your life are you most critical?
- How does mindfulness training help you handle self-hate?
- When you think of “vain things”, what comes to mind?

Toolbox

- What has been your experience with the Shoulds Worksheet?
- What area of your pride is hurt when you cannot perform perfectly?
- Has anyone tried doing a preemptive worksheet about an upcoming situation?
- Why do you think it’s so hard to let go of our judgments?

Sharing

(You can ask any of the questions from the Toolbox or Meditation sections)

- It is very difficult to make a paradigm shift, moving from one culture or pattern to another. The philosopher Thomas Kuhn, who came up with the concept of personal paradigms, believed that no one can change paradigms, and yet, that is exactly what God is asking us to do. What does a paradigm shift look like for you?
- Paradigms can be defined in terms of what we value, what goals we choose, what we want from our lives. What is different about your values and goals since you have been in KF training?
- Did anyone notice a change in their need to fix others after last week’s integration?

Bible Teaching

- How do expectations kill gratitude and stop circulation?
- What do you hope to see in your life this year through your KF work?
- Which of these choices is most difficult for you: Words, Attitude, or Action?
- When a door in your mind opens, a door in your future opens. What do you think that means?

- What do you think about this statement by William James: “Action may not always bring happiness, but there is no happiness without action.”

Integration

(You can ask any of the questions from the previous sections)

- How do the integrations help heal you and your community?
- What would you like to discover this year in your karis relationship with God?
- What Words, Attitudes, or Actions might further your relationship with God?
