

The Claim and Blame Worksheet

Part One: You Are Here

1. What reaction or feeling has let you know that you are misoriented?
2. What feelings are you experiencing? (Highlight all the words below that describe your feelings and make a note of any others not listed here. You might also notice where in your body you feel these emotions)

Contemptuous	Frustrated	Unimportant	Vulnerable	Disconnected
Resentful	Exasperated	Insulted	Withholding	Obsessing
Judgmental	Irritated	Humiliated	Discouraged	Unloved
Deprived	Jealous/envious	Vindictive	Despair	Threatened
Panic	Impatient	Justified	Victimized	Put-upon
Anxious	Angry/wrathful	Unappreciated	Hurt	Inconvenienced
Shocked	Battle-mode	Demanding	Self-pitying	Immobilized
Cheated/betrayed	Embarrassed	Inflexible	Bitter/blaming	Sadness/grief

Are you experiencing a physical reaction (e.g., restlessness, pacing, fight or flight, heart racing, tension, shaking, lump in throat, exhaustion, fatigue, aching, trembling, faintness, nausea, heat, chill)?

3. When did you start feeling this way? Can you identify an event that triggered the feelings?
4. How are you compelled or tempted to regain your comfort or sense of fairness? Do you want to punish anyone?

Part Two: Looking Deeply

1. What should have happened to maintain your comfort? Or, what happened that is bad or unfair?
2. I deserve: _____.
Examples: exemption from restrictions, including cause and effect, rules, necessities, and laws—whether natural, civil, personal, or social; consideration; attention; deference; devotion; appreciation; respect; success; popularity; the fulfillment of my dreams and ideals; perfect results; a happy childhood; courtesy; honesty and decency from others; the best of everything; to be obeyed; to succeed; to be right; to have everyone see things my way; to be left alone; to live in peace; to experience God’s special care; to be accommodated.
3. I have a right to: _____.
Examples: attack; withdraw; act with impunity; do whatever I want; belittle others; get revenge; crush; pick on people or take digs at others; speak my mind; force; punish; manipulate; guilt-trip people to do things my way; accuse; complain; be depressed; be sick; be rude; quit; judge; pity myself; sulk; undermine others; self-sabotage; be deceitful; indulge myself.

4. In my superior wisdom, I know life would be perfect if only _____
_____.

Part 3: Recovery

1. Recall the Two Paths Flowchart. What judgment have you made about your event? BAD/GOOD
2. What do you fear when life is unfair and out of your control? This usually has to do with the loss of an aspect of your Idol's search for glory.
3. Without judgment, simply list the sequence of events in the situation. Take the Believe It Path.

4. Are you ready to let go of your judgment about what happened? YES/NO

If not, you might pray the prayer below or use one of the tools listed in step 7. Then, try this step again.

God and Creator, only You are qualified to judge what is evil and what is good. I am only a creature. By continuing to condemn and punish I am trying to save my life and stand in Your place. (Breathe) I now release this judgment and all that it is doing for me. Thank You for revealing the fear that compels me to judge. I want to learn to love like You do and fulfill Your will on earth as it is in Heaven.

Take a deep breath.

5. Rejoice in the truth of your discoveries about yourself, others, and the Creation. What have you learned?

6. Are you now ready to take action? Do you agree with this prayer? YES/NO

Father and Creator, I used this event to misorient and took the Judgment Path. I blamed myself and others for my reaction and consequences. I refused to simply believe what is and accept what this situation teaches me about myself and life. I felt the fear of death and tried to save my life through _____. I now choose to reorient to the glory that is mine and submit to the training that You have presented to me. Thank You for making me aware of my need for development and for leading me to more opportunity for healing and growth.

Take a deep breath.

7. To integrate what you have learned, use a tap, UFO Hold, TAT, Healing Color, or meditation (instructions for these integrations can be found on the Karis Fellowships website under Toolbox). If you choose to tap, you might use a clearing statement like this: My problem is that I judged this event as evil/good, and when I think of that, I feel _____.
8. Report to the group and celebrate your effort.
